To whom it may concern:

This letter is in reference to Thomas Lochner, a current student of mine in Calculus I. Although this is an online class, it is clear to me that Thomas participates meaningfully and regularly, he asks a lot of good questions, and is on a path to earn an A in the course.

What impresses me even more than his high grades is that Thomas would rather turn in an assignment late (for less points) just to make sure he met with me in person to make sure he fully understood the problem and the solution. Very often I see students care more about their grade than truly understanding the material.

I hope you will consider Thomas for a position in your organization.

Don't hesitate to contact me if you have any further questions.
